

EACH KIND OF LIQUOR GETS BUT ONE NAME

Capers Decides Dealers Must Not Sell Same Brand Under Different Labels.

ASKS SPECIAL TAX ON EACH PRODUCT

Ruling Opposes One Made by Yerkes Several Years Ago—Asked for by Prohibitionists.

A decision has just been rendered by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that will check, if not stop altogether, the practice that has prevailed for years among certain rectifiers and wholesale liquor dealers of putting on the market the same product under different names. The Commissioner's decision reverses a ruling of former Commissioner Yerkes, who held that rectifiers and wholesale liquor dealers could place on the market the same product under a half dozen different names or styles without being subject to a special tax for each.

Commissioner Capers, in a carefully prepared opinion, decides that any "person, firm, or corporation carrying on business as rectifier or wholesale liquor dealer at one place or time under different names, must pay a separate special tax for each name or style under which the business is done."

And the business under each name must be done in the same manner as if done in but one name.

If the practice of carrying on business by the rectifiers or wholesale liquor dealers is continued, it will add largely to Uncle Sam's revenues, but it is believed by the Treasury officials that the practice will be discontinued. This question of names and styles, it was intimated today, was brought to the attention of the department by the Prohibitionists, who are fighting the liquor dealers.

In prohibition States, a careful watch is kept on all whisky shipped into the State, and the name of the brand or the wholesale liquor dealer often leads to the prevention of further importations of the same kind. When such prevention becomes effective, the name liquor dealer ships into the prohibition State another lot of whisky under another name. It was the discovery of this trick of substituting names that brought the matter to the attention of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

OFFERS $500 PRIZE TO FLYING MACHINES

First Aeroplane Sailing Across Lake Michigan Lands Chicago

Man's Money.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—In the hope of increasing interest in flying machines and aeroplanes in the vicinity of Chicago, Edward F. Harbert, of 1822 E. 12th place, has offered a prize of $500 to the first person who succeeds in crossing from Chicago to South Haven in an aeroplane. Harbert, himself an enthusiast on the subject, is building an aeroplane, but will not compete for the prize.

The money was posted with a local bank yesterday and to be won the flight must be made within a year. The participants must be Americans.

RESCUED SEAMEN BROUGHT TO PORT

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 9.—The steamship Michigan brought here John E. Burke and John Burnine, Nova Scotia fishermen from the schooner Bohemia, of Gloucester, Mass. They left the schooner in a dory September 22, and could not find their way back through the fog. They had been eight days without food or water when the Michigan sighted the boat flying a shirt on an oar.

HELD BY TEETH.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Oct. 9.—A balloon catastrophe which might have meant the loss of three lives was averted this afternoon by Leo Stevens, who at the height of 1,200 feet, climbed from the car into the rigging of the balloon Boston, and, posing himself on his elbows, opened the safety valve with his teeth.

"PURSUIT OF PLEASURE" WHICH STOPS SHOPPERS

EASEL LANDSCAPE HALTS ATTENTION

Cooper's "Pursuit of Pleasure" Exhibited at Kann's Store.

Another masterpiece from the brush of Asley D. M. Cooper, the celebrated artist, is on exhibition on the fourth floor of S. Kann, Sons & Co. The picture is entitled "The Pursuit of Pleasure" and the artist is said to have drawn his inspiration from Henryk Sienkiewicz's famous novel, "Quo Vadis."

The canvas measures 10 by 15 feet and is incased in a rich dark frame. A row of electric lights, shaded by screens, bring out every detail in the painting and show the lights and shade in the picture with marvelous effect.

The scene is in an old Roman garden outside "The City of Pleasure" and shows how, not content with the entertainment offered by luxurious Rome, the revelers have gone outside the gates in search of greater pleasures, and blinded in their joy, they rush on to destruction.

Delicate Lines Effective.

In the center of the picture is shown a young centurion. The four fiery chargers he is driving realize the danger of the precipice ahead and show their fright in every line.

In the immediate foreground, seated on a stone bench, is one of the vestal virgins who has so far forgotten herself as to mingle with the common multitude. Her snow-white drapery, the emblem of purity and her holy calling as a priestess in the temple, has changed to pink, and the bronze lamp entrusted to her that she might tend its sacred fire until her death, has been blown out.

Lying in the foreground is a young bacchant with a cithara, the poetically classical instrument of old Rome. Inside the Roman bath is the bacchant's sister holding the olive branch, gazing at the young Roman warrior in the chariot. Of the two groups of allegorical figures in the air, the one draped in black with the evening star on her head represents Night, receding, swinging the incense before her, above her the moon, and her torch bearer leading the way. The other group, wrapped in a blaze of radiance, represents Dawn, arising with her suite of apids, thus designating the time of day.

Detail Notable Feature.

The detail with which Mr. Cooper has enhanced his painting is its most notable feature. This has been a striking attribute of his former exhibitions at Kann's, and one of the things which has made his paintings famous.

The painting will be on exhibition two weeks, and is on view for the public.

THOUSAND APPLY FOR VOTE LEAVE

Exodus From Departments On Election Eve Will Be Notable.

"Yes, I am going home to vote. The Civil Service Commissioners have officially stated that in voting I am not violating any rules or orders." This was heard with much frequency in the corridors of the several executive departments today.

That the employees of the classified service will avail themselves of the privilege of casting their ballots on election day was made manifest last evening and today by the large number of Government clerks calling at Interstate Republican Headquarters for information on the subject of railroad rates given to voters.

The publication in The Times yesterday of the statement from the Civil Service Commissioners that employees in the classified service lost none of their political rights, which includes the right and duty to vote for the candidates of their choice, had a marked effect on hundreds of Government clerks. The indications today are that the exodus of clerks to their homes to vote on election day will be the largest noted in many years.

At the Government Printing Office today it was stated that more than a thousand employees have applied for leave to go home to vote. More than a hundred applications were filed by the employees this morning who probably would not have done so had it not been for the published statement from the Civil Service Commissioners.

Henry M. Camp, who is in charge of the Interstate Republican headquarters, said today that he believed the departmental work will have to be conducted for a day or two, around election time, by District of Columbia employees of the service, as so many voters are going home.

WANT GREAT ARCH IN CAPITAL CITY

A great arch to be dedicated to the everlasting union of the States is suggested in a communication sent to the Commissioners by the executive committee of the Meridian Heights and Leander Heights Citizens Association.

A site for the structure on Meridian Heights, spanning Sixteenth street and facing the White House, is suggested.

POPE SENDS PRAISE WITH ARCHBISHOP

Mgr. Farley, Returning From Rome, Declares Pontiff Admires Americans.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Archbishop Farley came back to New York from Rome today on the North German Lloyd liner Prinzessin Irene and brought with him a message of good will and explicitly expressed admiration for the American people from Pope Pius.

The return of the archbishop was made the occasion of a demonstration of welcome on the part of 300 Roman Catholic dignitaries of the church and prominent laymen who went to meet the liner in a chartered steamer such as has seldom occurred in New York.

A committee representing the prominent prelates of the diocese chartered the steamer Rosedale which, with 1,000 Catholics on board, went down to Quarantine.

"I found the Pope in excellent health," said the archbishop to reporters when he had boarded the Rosedale. "In fact, he was in much better health than when I saw him the last time seven years ago. His Holiness sends his best wishes to the American people. He says he considers the American people most wonderful and that he has the greatest admiration for them and for American institutions."

The archbishop went to Rome to take Pope's Pence collected in America to the Vatican on the occasion of the Pope's jubilee.

BELIEVES BOY DEAD; ACCUSES A LAWYER

New York Woman Says Her Husband Is Not Father of Kidnaped Lad.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Mrs. Frances McCloud, of 236 Schermerhorn street, Brooklyn, whose seven-year-old son, Harold, was mysteriously kidnaped, while he was playing on the street, today positively identified clothes worn by a boy whose body was washed ashore at Belford, N. J., on Tuesday last as those she had given her son, and then declared the child's father had stolen him and put him to death.

She told the police of Belford that the boy's father was not her husband, Alexander McCloud, as generally supposed, but a New York lawyer who is soon to be married to a woman of prominence and wealth.

She was firm in the belief that the father had murdered the child to suppress a scandal, which might prevent his marriage.

The identification of the clothes was made in the undertaking establishment of Melville P. Yard, where the child's body was taken after it was dragged from the water. There was no claimant for the body, and its condition compelled a hasty burial. The clothes, however, were kept in the hopes that they would lead to an identification.

HARRY REID KNOWS

Read What He Says About Treatment for Bald Heads.

Henry Evans, the druggist, does not guarantee Parisian Sage to grow hair on every bald head, but if there is any life left in the roots of your hair Parisian Sage will stimulate the hair bulbs and cause your hair to grow again.

Here is one case: "I am now using the second bottle of your Parisian Sage, and can notice a new growth of hair appearing. I am glad to say it is a darker color than my hair was before I became bald."—Harry Reid, 12 Manhattan St., Rochester, N. Y.

Don't wait until you're bald before using Parisian Sage—use it now. Kill the dandruff germ and prevent baldness. Henry Evans, the druggist, sells Parisian Sage at 50 cents a large bottle, and he guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair, and cure all diseases of the scalp, or money back.

Parisian Sage is a delightfully invigorating hair dressing; it makes the hair soft, fluffy and beautiful, and is in great demand by women who desire luxuriant and attractive hair. If you do not live near a druggist who sells Parisian Sage, you can get a bottle direct for 50 cents, all charges prepaid, from Giroux Mfg. Co., Buffalo, N. Y.
